THE BONDS SHOULD CARRY

Next Tuesday's election will settle the fate of the proposed bond issue, for the present at least, and by the same right will decide the future of Alliance for the same period.

The authority for the issue, $47,000, is asked by the mayor and city council that certain outstanding warrants and other floating indebtedness may be taken up, the city's credit bolstered and needed improvement made in the months to come.

Alliance, like all other growing cities, must recognize at once the fact that in just such proportions as the town grows so will the cost of conducting the affairs of the municipality increase. Such being the case there must be provided a means of increased revenue, either by greater tax assessments or by supplemented methods.

All this progress is possible and will be accomplished, but it will not be done by any ridiculous attempt to so lessen the cost of financing the city as to make possible the taking up of this indebtedness within a reasonable length of time.

upon for larger things and we should by our vote next Tuesday express ourselves as uncompromisingly in favor of the bond issue.

MR. TAFT APPLAUDS LEAGUE

"All who have pressed for a league of nations to maintain peace and prevent war must thank God as they read the provisions of the constitution of the league upon which the nations in conference at Paris have agreed," says former President Taft, in a copy-righted editorial in the Philadelphia Ledger.

"President Wilson is to be warmly congratulated," Mr. Taft graciously asserts, "that the league of nations which he promised to the harassed allied peoples in his messages and addresses and has urged before the conference, has taken such a form."

"It is a real league. It has clinching and cinching provisions," Mr. Taft maintains in an able and comprehensive analysis of the covenant, which combats the criticism and should dispel the doubts of opponents of the league.

The statement made in some quarters that the constitution of the league as agreed upon nullifies the Monroe Doctrine is sharply challenged by Mr. Taft. On this all-important question he says:

"Article X covers the Monroe Doctrine AND EXTENDS TO THE WORLD. The league is not a super-sovereign, but a partnership intended to secure to us and all nations only the sovereignty we can properly have, i. e., sovereignty regulated by international law and morality and consistent with the same sovereignty of other nations. The United States is not under this constitution to be forced into actual war against its will. This league is to be regarded in conflict with the advice of Washington only with a narrow and reactionary viewpoint."

Mr. Taft closes his editorial endorsement of the league with the hope "that a forward-looking senate will not seek to defeat this grand advance of mankind toward a just and lasting peace."

"Now that President Wilson brings back to us a real league, and has fully made good his announced purpose, it would greatly please this country if the senators could give him unanimous support," Mr. Taft concludes. "The fourteen nations have done so, why not the senate? Such action would be heard around the world with acclaim."

ONE ON "SCRUB" PEELER

The term "booze hound" is usually used when applied to the man who catches bootleggers, but it had a different meaning the night before last at Bridgeport. "Scrub" Peeler, former well known Alliance man, is now the city marshal at Bridgeport. His work consists largely of watching the arrivals from the trains which come down from Wyoming, for many try to smuggle in booze.

"Scrub" and a state "booze hound" were watching the arrivals get off the Casper train. Among them was a rather elderly man, poorly dressed, who carried an old suitcase. The old chap handled the suitcase gingerly, as though it might contain something that would break. Setting it carefully inside the door of the waiting room at the depot, he left the scene, as though afraid to be seen in company with the suitcase any more than absolutely necessary.

"Scrub" and his companion immediately scented booze and moved nearer to the suitcase, keeping their eyes glued on it as though fearful that it might get away. Presently, as they looked, a thin stream of dark liquid oozed from the suitcase onto the floor.

"Ah, we've got the goods on the old gent now," said Scrub. "He's bumped the suitcase and broken a bottle." Stepping quickly to the suitcase he thrust his index finger of his right hand into the little pool on the floor and tasted carefully. "That's whiskey," said he. His companion followed example. "No, that ain't whiskey, it's gin or somethin' else that's intoxicatin'," said he.

"Well, we'll see which is right," said Scrub, and they proceeded to open the suitcase without delay, in full view of the crowd which had been watching them. Inside the suitcase was—and there was nothing else—a pair of young hound pups, which gave vent to their feelings of gladness by howls of joy, which mingled with the howls of the crowd as "Scrub" and the "booze hound" fled down the track murmuring, "never again, never again."

Chas. Bell, for some time employed by the city, left the first of the week for Pennsylvania, where he was called by the death of a sister.

A GREAT ECONOMY BECAUSE OF EXTRA WEAR

"After a trip to Kilauea, the active volcano of Hawaii, my Neolin-soled shoes were the only ones not absolutely ruined. Many in our party wore hob-nailed boots," said Miss Jean P. Lane of Seattle, Washington.

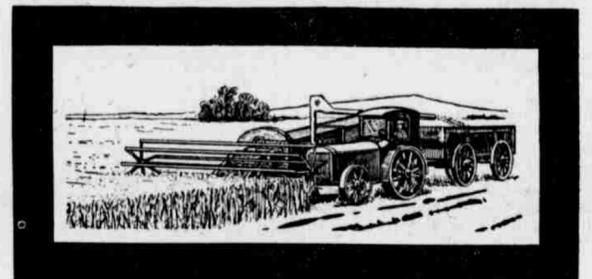

The sharp jagged lava of Kilauea cuts an ordinary sole to pieces quickly. That Neolin Soles stood the test but emphasizes their toughness and durability. These qualities are built into them by a scientific process. Women—and men and children, too—who are hard on shoes should buy them with Neolin Soles. They come in many styles, and because of the extra wear they give, are a great economy.

And any repairman will re-sole your worn shoes with Neolin Soles, which are flexible and waterproof as well as long-wearing. They are made by The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., Akron, Ohio, who also make Wingfoot Heels, guaranteed to outwear all other heels.
